Category:Impulse responseThose who follow the business of blogging would know the term 'Professionalism'. Well, in the layman's, it means something like: "do not be one of the crowd". Bloggers who indulge in their 'Egotism' (or 'egoism') and indulge in comments that don't 'conform' to the 'rules', will have a 'bad-bouncy-traffic-time' soon. Well, me too and I am learning. If I am right, the only reason why you are reading my posts. If this is happening, the only reason why you came to know about me. The rest of you are the ones who are reading this post! It's not my target audience. I am a realist, not a dreamer. If you read this, it's because you actually want to get the information from me. Don't read it only for the sake of reading, which is very common. The contents are by no means meant for viewing, if you want to do that, you can go to the original post at the website. By far, the most annoying part of this would be, I have to be in this profession for 6 years and it is still going on. I would like to think that Blogging is a creative occupation which can be done at any age. What I feel is that Bloggers have this inbuilt 'Work-Work-Work' mindset and over-estimate the role of Internet as an easy to earn money. Don't get me wrong, it is an earning source, and all one needs to do is to follow the right means and understand this is still a work-in-progress. The reader-audience is so large that anyone willing to write a post with their thoughts, experiences and anything of that sort, on any given topic, can reach such huge numbers. What's good in that, for us bloggers, but I guess many don't think of that and reach out the 'Heights' of taking their valuable information and turn it into an entire 'Self-satisfied'. Many of them start writing blogs about their personal journeys, or their 'opinions', and many people start reading them. The content is great, to an extent that it gains TRP (Total Readership). However, after a while when they notice that there is no effort to comment on other blogs and there is no interaction
