Lupus nephritis is a major cause of renal dysfunction and end-stage renal disease (ESRD) in patients with systemic lupus erythematosus (SLE). The aim of this study is to assess the utility of late graft loss as a possible marker of disease activity and/or damage. ESRD patients under regular haemodialysis (HD) therapy with functioning graft for at least 2 years were included in this study. The following data were recorded: age, sex, mode of dialysis before graft loss and after graft loss, type of graft, time of graft loss, SLE activity and damage index (SLEDAI-2K and SLICC/ACR Damage Index). In addition to routine clinical measures of renal function, levels of proteinuria, complement, creatinine clearance and histological data were also recorded. SLE activity was assessed by SLE Activity Index (SLAI), and damage by SLICC/ACR Damage Index (SDI) during the year of graft loss. 106 patients were followed. SLE activity and damage (SLEDAI-2K and SLICC/ACR SDI) in the year of graft loss were similar in both transplanted and non-transplanted patients. SLE activity and damage before and after graft loss was correlated ($r = 0.51$, $P < 0.001$)
